DAISY TUTORIAL

To recreate this flower, we are going to use five brushes from the Effortless Brush Set. Namely Leaf No. 10, Petal No. 5, Pollen No. 4 and 8. Make sure that your Dynamic Scaling is turned on when you're using this brush set, you can find this under Actions > Preferences.

Go back to your layer and turn on Drawing Assist. Choose the color duo for the petals. After setting the primary and secondary colors for these dual brushes, remember to tap the primary color again, so that Procreate uses that as the active color.

Choose Petal No. 5 brush, then start painting the petals towards the center, tapering off at the end. One stroke and you'll have 8 petals. Draw another set so that you have 16 petals for this layer.

Add another layer but this time don't turn on the drawing assist. Use the green color duo and draw the stem using the Stem No. 10 brush.

Then add another layer. Set the color duo back to the petal color again, and this time draw the petals without Drawing Assist. This will help make it look more natural. This layer should be on top of the stem, so the top of the stem is covered.

Add another layer for the leaf. Set the color duo and using Leaf No. 10 brush, draw the leaf moving outward. Work with minimal pressure at first, add pressure to expand the leaf width then ease up on the pressure to taper off.

Add another layer for the pollen. Turn on symmetry and rotational symmetry again. Go to your layer and enable Drawing Assist. Set the color duo and use Pollen No. 8 first. Tap to create the circles moving in a curved direction, from the center outwards. Each circle should be slightly bigger than the last.
