BARBIE HAIR TUTORIAL

Let's begin by creating a 3000 x 3000-pixel canvas. Then import the sketch layer. Lower the opacity of this layer and set to multiply mode.

Next add a new layer for the canvas texture. Use Freya Oil Canvas No. 9 in a light gray color and cover the entire layer. Set this layer to multiply, lower the opacity, and lock the layer. Place this layer just below the sketch layer.

Then on another layer, use the Freya Oil Dry No.3 brush to create your base colors.

Add a new layer, set it to clipping mask. This will allow you to add more colors without going outside the bounds of the base layer. Use Freya Oil Wet No. 6 brush to draw the strands as illustrated. You can turn off the sketch layer or lower it's opacity.

Add a new layer, and set it to clipping mask again. This time we'll add some highlights using Freya Oil Wet No. 17 brush for the top part and Freya Oil Wet No. 15 for the locks.

anw_artanddesign I've been feeling pretty stressed so I decided to color a page and play with my @freya.arts oil paint brushes. I loooooove the result! The texture, the blending, all of it!

maridcedpa I prefer freya Oil dry!! ⚡💜 I think is the best texture, because it matches a lot with the real human skin texture, and it looks beautifully than the other
